Conference Proceedings

February 25 & 26, 2002

In a CAPP survey of synergy group members, one of the most common comments was the expectation many had coming into the conference that it would focus on divisive issues. Many noted the strong focus on the process of relationship-building to solve issues. Indeed, many of the participants were surprised at the number of groups actively working, the variety of approaches that can succeed, and the fact that this goes unnoticed.

There is active interest in forming a “federation” of synergy groups.

Action Planning

The intent is to begin to build a plan for synergy. The outcome could be a draft passed on to a transition committee for further development and refinement – possibly for eventual circulation and feedback. This is an example of convergence: coming together, co-operation: working together, and communication: talking/listening together, in action. Demonstrating that the Roundtable itself and the continuing work in building the plan is “synergy building synergy”.
